

IRC Introduced New Americas Leader in Atlanta

May 4th, 2017

IRC Global Executive Search Partners recently held their Americas Regional Meeting in Atlanta, USA. Tom Berray, the Managing Partner IRC USA – Cabot Consultants, was introduced as the new IRC Americas Leader during the meeting.

The Americas regional team of IRC met in Atlanta, the capital and booming business center of Georgia, to discuss the latest trends in the search for executive talent and to exchange best practice ideas designed to meet both current and future clients' needs.

The meeting was for the first time conducted by Tom Berray. Tom has taken over from Jane Lyons, IRC USA – Rhodes Associates, stepped down from the role after successful two years as the IRC Americas Regional Leader.

Tom Berray has worked in executive search for more than 15 years, placing executives in early-stage companies and Fortune 100s. His expertise spans IT, aerospace/defense, biotech, energy, financial services, government, professional services, healthcare and non-profits. Prior to joining IRC USA - Cabot Consultants, Tom was a principal in the technology practice of Heidrick & Struggles, where he recruited senior IT executives. Before joining the search field, Tom worked with Gartner's Executive Programs, advising over 200 CIOs and CTOs. He previously held positions at Computer Associates and Xerox Corporation. Tom earned a B.S. in computer science and economics from Duke University.

"I am excited and honored to take on the IRC Americas Leader role and I thank Jane Lyons for her leadership over the past two years. I look forward to building on Jane's work to help grow IRC's capabilities and influence across the Americas region. I firmly believe that IRC's business model of "Globally Connected and Locally Committed" enables our member firms to offer the highest quality and value services to our clients both locally and across the globe”, Tom Berray commented.
